In the Evening - Led Zeppelin

Repeat this: \(^{5}\) times pretty quickly

The intro thing is just a droning synthesizer and Jimmy playing the open E-string with a bow. The overdub is called (I think) a rotovibe which produces that rolling sound.

The main riff is double-tracked and with a little adlibbing is basically: by the way this is with a strat, or something with a whammy bar:

The first chorus has something like this:

The second and fourth choruses go with this chord sequence: using a chorus in this series

The fourth chorus has this backing line: This slowed part is backed with these arpeggiated chords

The chorus before the solo goes like this:

The solo over it goes like this:
The solo is something like this:

The starting thing is Jimmy holding down the Whammy Bar as hard as he can and forcefully picking out a E-Chord and letting up on the bar:

The outro solo:

E------15-17*19-17-15-17--------129/12------

b--17-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

The solo is something like this:
